

Bringing Empathy into the Classroom: Valuing the Differences Lesson Concept

On its surface, art may seem to have one purpose or audience, but closer examination can help reaffirm a broader human connection. Art can speak to us no matter our background, race, gender, religion, orientation, ability, age, or socioeconomic status. Using art in the classroom allows us to celebrate diversity in a powerful and meaningful way. For additional information, this lesson concept can be paired with the resource set
